lection has not yet been decided upon by the President, but it is understood that he is under consideration.
It is expected that President Roosevelt will sign today the commissions of about thirty artiflery officers. The idea prevails that President Roosevelt will inaugurate a policy looking toward the injection of younger blood in the army.

Arrangements for the Obsequies Not Yet Completed.

Remains Will Be Interred at Rock Creek Cemetery-Expressions of Sympathy From Prominent Citizens-Court of Enquiry Adjourns.

Arrangements have not yet been con pleted for the funeral of Judge Jeremiah M. Wilson, who died yesterday morning at his apartments in the Shoreham. A delay in the completion of the prepara-tions for the obsequies was occasioned by the belated arrival in Washington of Judge Wilson's daughter, Mrs. Anna Wilon Haywood, who was at the summer me of the family in Oakland, Md., when she was advised of the death of her father. She did not reach Washington until late last night, and was then too much overcome with grief to give the matter consideration.

The arrangements will be announced this morning. It is probable, that the funeral services will take place at the family home, 1712 I Street, on Thursday afternoon. It is believed that the clergyman who officiated at Judge Wilson's wedding will conduct the services. The interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery beside the grave of Mrs. Wilson. The list of pallbearers is being prepared by A. A. Hoehling, jr., Judge

Wilson's law partner.
The death of the distinguished attorney. who for nearly a quarter of a century has held a foremost position at the Washngton har, was a great shock to his wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Since his return from a trip to Europe about six weeks ago he had been in excellent health for a man of his years. He freuently expressed himself as feeling well. and it was a fact commented upon by these who saw him and knew him inti-misely that he was looking much better than he had appeared before for a conderable time.

o'clock yesterday morning he was taken ill, with what he believed to be a severe attack of indigestion. He had felt it slightly during the night before, but had given it little or no attention, thinking that it would gradually wear away.

His condition became so bad that he was soliged to summon medical aid. His physician, Dr. Gardner, is absent in Europe, and he therefore called Dr. H. F. Bishop, who responded and remained with Judge Wilson until 5 o'clock in the morning. Judge Wilson was then feeling somewhat better, and he thought that he would be able to resume his work as usual.

He arose at his accustomed hour and Dr. Bishop called again shortly after so o'clock. Judge Wilson are a light breakfast and then held another consultation with Mr. Rayner and Admiral Schley.

The Schley Court of Enquiry at the Navy Yard had just been opened yesterday morning when the news of Judge Wilson's death was received by telephone message from the Shareham Hotel, A. B. Claxton, formerly a muchinist on the Texas during the Santiago campaign and now employed by the Washington Gastight Company, was on the witness stand. He had only had an opportunity to be sworn, to state his name, the fact that he was aboard the Texas, and that he was now out of the service, when an orderly brought the message to Mr. Phyyner.

The information was whispered about the court room hurriedly. Mr. Rayner made the fact known to Captain Lemly, the judge advocate, who, in turn, told Afmiral Dewey. The proceedings were suspended while Captain Parker hastened to a telephone and confirmed the report.

Mr. Rayner then arose and addressed the court.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. Roosevelt is expected to arrive at the White House today. The resident portion of the mansion has been put in readiness for her coming; carpets are down and the personal belongings of the President's family set in their proper place, so that the new house which she is to so unexpectedly take possession of will seem very like home. According to a per picture recently published in New York, where Mrs. Roosevelt is so well known and liked, she is described as rather pe-tite, with brown halr and eyes, a clear skin that colors prettily when excited and a beautiful and expressive mouth She dresses simply, especially in the street; wears no jewels, except with evening dress, which is always extremely handsome. She has not varied for years the style of her hairdressing. The hair is parted, smoothed simply back from the forehead, and coiled at the back of the head, with some few natural ringlets around the temples; but there is no attempt made to follow each move of fash ion. Mrs. Roosevelt has understood her own style and dresses accordingly. The athletic sports of the day do not appeal to her, but she is a good horsewoman and has taken up riding again within the last two or three years. She is an expert needlewoman, writes cleverly, and there is somewhere extant a book of verse which she has published for private cir-culation. She is a member of several luncheon clubs, but she has never taken part in fashionable entertainments, and her name appears very rarely on the list

Announces His Position at the Cabinet Meeting Appreciates the Magnitude of Problem - Department Administration Discussed

President Roosevelt is rapidly getting in touch with the great problems with which the Administration will soon have to deal. Only four members of the Cabinet-Sec-retaries Gage and Wilson, Postmaster General Smith and Attorney Genera Knox-attended the Cabinet meeting yesterday, held in the White House at o'clock.
There was one noteworthy feature of the meeting. The President placed him-self on record as thoroughly in accord with the views on reciprocity expressed by Mr. McKinley shortly before his death. But Mr. Roosevelt accompanied this ut-terance with a statement of his apprecia-tion of the magnitude of the subject, and of the difficulties which would be encoun-tered in carrying out a consistent sched-ule of reciprocal trade relations with other countries. The President announced that he will give close attention to the study the meeting. The President placed himhe will give close attention to the study of the subject. This is accepted as an indication that he considers the question to be the next great economic problem to be dealt with by Congress.

The President had a comparatively light day in respect to visitors, owing to the fact that it was Cabinet day. After his first night as Chief Executive beneath the roof of the White House the President appeared at his deak about $2.15 o'clock, looking better than he has at any time since his return to Washington. He begins work somewhat earlier than did President McKinley, who usually sat down at his desk about 10 o'clock.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock yesterday morning there were a number of callers, most of whom merely desired to pay their respects to the President. Among the number were Lieutenant Commander Sharp and Capt. B. P. Lamberton, U. S. N., the latter of whom was commanding officer of Dewey's flagship, the Olympin, at the battle of Manila Bay. W. M. Johnson and W. S. Shallenberge. First and Second Assistant Postmasters General; Senators Harris and Burton, of Kansas; T. W. After the Cabinet meeting the President went to lunch and then returned to his desk. The only appointment made during the day was that of Frank B. Littell to be professor of mathematics in the mays, with the rank of lieutenant.

At 4:30 o'clock the President left the White House in company with Colonel Sanger, Acting Secretary of War, who had called on matters of business. They entered Colonel Sanger's carriage and drove up Sixteenth Street.

The President returned to the White House and dined. There were only a few callers during the evening.
